Dear Whomever it May Concern:

I am writing with regard to the Microsoft Antitrust suits. I would like to encourage a much harsher penalty for Microsoft that MS's original "deal." Such a sentence where they get to "pay" with their own software, which is costing them a few cents per CD and further securing their hold on the market, is unacceptable.

I would also like to point out that it is impossible to "monitor" a corporation like Microsoft. It would not be feasible to expect anyone to know everything that goes on at such a massive organization. Instead, restrictions need to be put in place to ensure they *cannot* commit further violations of the law. A course of action that will actually affect Microsoft should be agreed upon, and an even worse one in case they make this mistake again (for example, fees below $1 billion would not do much harm to them and thus should be avoided).

Lastly, I am in full support of a breakup of the giant. In addition to discouraging unfair bundling of their software, stock splits and additional jobs are likely to be results: things we could all use.

Thank you for your time,
Phil Dibowitz
